Wanted Her Money.

Paris, Texas, Oct. 24.—Quite a novel case was reported to the officers here Monday. A young man had become engaged to a young lady. The young lady was taken sick a few days ago and her widowed mother being in limited circumstances the betrothal was taken to the home of a German woman to be nursed, who was to receive $4. per week for the time the young lady remained in her charge. Yesterday the young man was informed that his sweetheart was not receiving the proper treatment due one in ill health, and he made up his mind to marry her and take her in his own charge. The ceremony was performed by a minister, but when the groom started to lead his bride to a carriage to take her home there was a hitch in the proceedings. The German nurse would not give the patient up until she had been paid for her services. The young man applied for a writ of sequestration but was advised to pay the old woman for her trouble and stop further proceedings, which he did and now all is lovely and serene.

Dakota Sufferers Relief Fund.

New York, October 24.—Governor Church, of Dakota, called at the Herald office yesterday and received the fund subscribed for the relief of starving Hebrew families of Ramsey county Dakota. He left the following receipt in the Herald's possession: Received from James Gordon Bennett, $3,035 to be distributed among the sufferers in Dakota. [Signed] J. K. CHURCH, Governor. In forwarding the money to Dakota Governor Church recommended that the money should be wisely and judiciously expended to relieve people in actual want.

Supreme Court Decisions.

Tyler, October 24.—The court of appeals rendered decisions in the following cases to-day: Affirmed—Robinson vs. the state, from Franklin; S. Wencke vs. the state from Colorado; Norman vs. the state from Red River. Reversed and remanded—Minter vs. the state from Morris; Hamilton vs. the state from Fanning; Arcia vs. the state, from Webb; Phillips vs. the state from Upshur; Elkins vs. the state, from Morris. Appeal dismissed—Blankenship vs. the state, from McLennan.

Instantly Killed.

Rloomington, Ind., Oct. 24.—A terrible accident occurred at the stone quarries at Emmetsville, this county, yesterday, resulting in the instant death of two men. Workmen were engaged in raising a large stone from the quarry when one of the guy ropes slipped and the stone fell with tremendous force upon George Johnston and William Aiken, mashing them out of all semblance to human beings and killing them both instantly.

Delia Dondican, an Irish immigrant eighteen years old, fell from the rear platform of the Sag Harbor express on the Long Island Railroad on Wednesday last and was killed. Being a stranger and unaccustomed to railroad traveling, she asked frequent questions as to her destination, which was Islip. When she heard the name of that station called the inexperienced and impatient girl arose and went out on the platform. There she lost her balance and pitched head first off the train, the customary guard chain across the rear platform being absent. She was still breathing when the train hands picked her up, but her neck was broken and she died in a few minutes. The girl was going to join her elder sister at Islip. The sister had saved money to pay Delia's passage from the old country and was waiting for her at Islip station. When she saw the dead body of her sister her grief, says an account, was pitiful to witness.

The Influence of Pins.

The influence of pins upon the female character is very serious. The pin at best is a mere makeshift. It is temporary in its aim and effect. Men's buttons have a solidity and permanence which correspond with the strength and persistence of the masculine character, but the fickleness of woman is symbolized in her pins. She can put off one garment and put on another with the help of pins alone, and when a pin has served its purpose, she throws it recklessly and heartlessly away. It is impossible that long continuance in such a course of action should fail to have its effect upon the character. Fickleness and coquetry are purely the result of pins.—William L. Alden in Once a Week.

Better than juice of watermelons for the face is juice of house leek, pounded and squeezed through muslin, mixed with sweet cream if you like, and left to dry on the skin. The juice alone will be preferred by most for it is soothing enough to heal a bee sting, or a canker, and the malic acid in it sometimes drives away freckles.

Upholstered furniture must be brushed and carefully looked over to see that moths have not found a home in it. If traces of these are found, go all over it with a sponge wet in pure benzine. When this is done do not have a fire or lamp in the room, nor for some days afterward. Leave the windows open so that the benzine may evaporate.

It is not necessary for a lady to offer her hand except in her own house, when it is the part of courtesy to do so. Gentlemen shake hands with each other on being introduced, and a lady may offer to shake hands if she likes; but no principle of courtesy or etiquette is violated if she does not do so.

To mend a broken article of celluloid, prepare a cement of one part of shellac dissolved in one part of spirits of camphor and three to four parts of 90 per cent. alcohol. Apply the cement warm, and hold the broken parts securely together until the solvent has entirely evaporated.

Scissors should be kept in good order. It is a mistake to use old scissors which have become nicked at the edges for trimming lamp wicks. This is frequently the cause of uneven wicks, which smoke the chimney and give a very uncertain light.

For the most part, what is commonly called "company" will refrain from visiting us just as soon as we cease to make sacrifices on their behalf of time, convenience, dress, money or flattery. It is ours, not us, they generally desire.

If before grinding the morning's coffee the berries are heated for four or five minutes, or until they take on a darker shade of brown, the flavor of the coffee will be much improved.

A broth of fennel, which is such a sauce for mackerel, is advised for persons who are growing too fleshy, or the roasted parsnip, or parsnip wine for those who would grow plump and full bodied.

Butter contracts during cold weather, forcing the brine to the surface, and the water evaporating, leaves the salt that was in the brine in flakes on the outside of the butter.

By adding a spoonful of vinegar and a little sugar to the stove blacking a high polish is easily produced.

New iron should be gradually heated at first. After it has become used to the heat it is not likely to crack.

Apple sauce is much improved by the addition of a tablespoonful of butter, and requires less sugar.

Keep a bit of emery paper in your work box for brightening and sharpening needles.

Cloves are said to be a better preventive of moths than tobacco, or camphor, or cedar.

Wash all marble daily with ammonia and water in place of soap.

Keep a separate sauce pan for boiling potatoes in if possible.

Gen. Phil Sheridan's Horses.

"I entertained Gen. Sheridan for three days solely against my will," said Professor Cabell, of Norwood institute. "It was during the war, and he had his command with him at my place in Virginia, on the James river. The soldiers dug a trench through my farm to divert the river at that point and prevent its carrying supplies to Lee. It was the fortune of war, and my sympathies were all with the Union, but the devastation was very serious to me."

"Have you forgiven Sheridan for his part in it?"

"Long ago. We have talked over it many times since he was my enforced guest, and always without any bitterness. He abandoned a thousand horses on my farm, where his soldiers killed them to prevent their falling into the hands of the Confederacy. I gave my men orders to have them removed and buried. Some time after I came upon an old darky belonging to the place who was plowing with a remarkable looking horse. In place of an eye it carried a lead bullet. I found several others with disfigurements of various kinds, which had been saved from the carnage and were put to work by the same economical old uncle, who was overseer of the plantation. When I remonstrated with him he coolly said: 'Til fo' tat, Massa Cabell, dass wah luck.'"

—Detroit Free Press.

The statue of Chinese Gordon, which was unveiled on Trafalgar Square, London, the other day, is a fine piece of sculpture, standing on a granite pedestal about ten feet high. The General is represented in a pensive attitude, with his chin resting in the palm of his right hand. The statue occupies a prominent place in the square, standing in the centre between the two columns. There was no ceremony at the unveiling, as there is a regulation against speeches in that square.
